Teams and individuals will put on their thinking caps to test their knowledge of Anchorage while having fun raising money and awareness for United Way's work to help kids be prepared and successful in school and life.

Participants in United Way's family friendly scavenger hunt event will spread out in all directions following clues that lead to some surprising and iconic places, people and things, all part of the history of Anchorage. There will be music played live by Movin 105.7, food truck and activities for kids.

Those who can't make it on the day of the Scavenger Hunt, but would like to make a direct donation to support Anchorage kids, can go to United Way's events page at www.liveunitedanc.org.
