STALZER EARNS CHARTERED ADVISOR IN PHILANTHROPY® DESIGNATION

Anchorage AK – Cassandra Stalzer, APR, vice president of transformational philanthropy at United Way of Anchorage, has become the second Alaskan to become a Chartered Advisor in Philanthropy® (CAP®), a designation of professional expertise from the American College of Financial Services.

Stalzer earned the designation through a rigorous course of study through the Richard D. Irwin Graduate School of the college.

CAP status means that Stalzer has the expertise to help families, gift planners and financial advisers build inspired legacy plans for giving to nonprofits that will create the maximum good in their communities and complement their goals for wealth management. Her expertise covers charitable trusts, private foundations, supporting organizations, donor-advised funds, pooled income funds and charitable gift annuities.

At United Way of Anchorage, Stalzer draws upon her 20 years in fundraising and development to connect donors to long-lasting impact in Anchorage through gifts of financial assets including securities, real estate and business interests. She is also leading the creation of planned giving opportunities such as bequests and endowed funds, and charitable gift annuities.
